

ADULT REDEPLOY ILLINOIS

DuPage County - Adult Redeploy Illinois

Goals and ARI background: ARI provides financial incentives to local jurisdictions that design evidence-based services to supervise and treat non-violent offenders in the community instead of sending them to state prisons. ARI is based on the premise that local jurisdictions can reduce crime and the costs of the criminal justice system by understanding and addressing the reasons why people commit crimes. Results expected with ARI include reduced prison overcrowding, lowered cost to taxpayers, and an end to the expensive and vicious cycle of crime and incarceration.

Start date: January 1, 2011; First enrollment: February 2011

Grant amount: $276,249 in SFY15 (includes 10% reduction from budget due to funding constraints)

Program model: Intensive probation supervision with services (probation violator caseload)

Need for ARI in DuPage County: Probation caseloads in DuPage County are in excess of the recommended state standard of cases of high-risk offenders, limiting a probation officer’s ability to implement creative, individualized case plans. Although DuPage County benefits from a strong continuum of services for offenders, a lack of publicly funded substance abuse treatment options, specifically inpatient services, creates a service gap. The ARI program makes it possible for probation officers to supervise a reduced caseload of high-risk offenders and probation violators, enabling officers to be more effective caseworkers, implement evidence-based interventions, and refer offenders to appropriate treatment providers and other community services.

Evidence-based/promising practices in use: LSI-R assessment, intensive probation with services, probation caseload standards, graduated sanctions and incentives, individualized and group cognitive behavioral interventions, Effective Practices in Community Supervision (EPICS), Thinking for a Change, Moving On (trauma-informed cognitive behavioral intervention), tools from the Carey Group and Change Companies.

Target population and reduction goal: The DuPage County ARI program target population is technical probation violators facing revocation to IDOC. A review of 2011-2013 Illinois Department of Corrections (IDOC) data indicates an annual average of 370 ARI-eligible commitments to IDOC. Of these, 113 were probation violators excluding sex offenders. The SFY15 25% reduction goal is 29 (25% of 113). As of June 30, 2014, there were 100 participants enrolled in the DuPage ARI program. The DuPage County ARI program also established a SFY15 “stretch” renewal reduction goal of 54 by adding current enrollments to their baseline (25% of 213 [113 + 100]).

Overview of jurisdiction: DuPage County is one of the “collar counties” bordered by Cook County to the north and east, Will to the south, and Kane to the west. The second most populous county in the state, DuPage is comprised of large, racially and economically diverse suburbs, such as Naperville and Aurora with populations well over 100,000 residents, as well as medium and small municipalities. Expected to surpass one million residents this decade and long considered an affluent community, as the population grows the demographics are shifting. A 2011 report by Bridge Communities stated nearly all of the net population growth in DuPage County from 1990-2004 was among the immigrant, low income, and minority populations, and poverty rates have increased in the county by 63% since 1980.

DuPage County Characteristics	Total
Population (2012)	927,987
Adults (ages 18 and over)	76% of population
Unemployment rate (2012)	8%
Percent of population below poverty line (2012)	6%
Percent of population with high school diploma (2012)	92%
Percent of population with a bachelor’s degree or higher (2012)	46%
Adult felony probation caseload (2011)	1,926
Court imposed sentences to felony probation (2011)	1,014
IDOC commitments (excluding technical parole violators, 2012)	656
Average daily jail population (2009)	917 (2008 capacity: 809)

Program model:

DuPage County's intensive probation supervision program consists of four probation officers assigned to probation-violator caseloads that are smaller than standard probation caseloads. The probation officers practice the evidence-based Effective Practices in Community Supervision (EPICS) model, a highly structured, cognitive-behavioral supervision protocol. Probationers meet with a probation officer two to four times per month. Meetings aim to change pro-criminal thinking patterns and teach/reinforce pro-social skills. Individual probation officers facilitate the evidence-based Thinking for a Change curriculum, and probationers access ancillary services as required. These services include substance abuse treatment, mental health services, vocational/employment services, housing assistance, community service, and drug testing.

Pathways into program:

An offender who receives a sentence of probation for a non-violent offense may be identified as appropriate for ARI through one of three referral pathways:

1. After a technical violation of probation, an administrative sanctions conference occurs to address the violation. If the offender accepts the sanction, the offender transfers to ARI caseload. LSI-R score and violation severity are considered.
2. When a Petition to Revoke (PTR) is pending in court, the probation department may file a court status form requesting an offender be screened for the ARI program if deemed appropriate by the court. LSI-R score and violation severity are considered.
3. Probation officer identifies offenders likely to violate probation (based on previous failures, extensive warrant histories). LSI-R score and history of non-compliance are considered.

Upon entry into the program, the ARI probation officer develops an individual case plan with the offender. Once the case plan goals are achieved, the offender is either transferred to standard probation, or probation is successfully terminated upon sentence completion.
